

Shiek Ilderim engages Ben-Hur to drive his Arabian steeds in the Chariot Races at Antioch.

'BEN-HUR'

"Ben-Hur" is a sermon in varied speech, illustrated by art and music. The curtain rises on the tableau of the Three Wise Men in the desert kneeling in adoration of the Star of Bethlehem, followed by the brilliantly-colored picture of the housetop of the Palace of Hur in Jerusalem. Next is the dim interior of the Roman, galley with the muscular grim-visaged slaves tugging in rhythmic motion at the oars; then the wreck and the rescue of Arrius and Ben-Hur. The scene changes to the sunlit Grove of Daphne, with its superb temple reared to the pagan god Apollo, and we see the revels in his honor.

After this comes the chariot race, unquestionably the most vivid, thrilling picture that the stage has ever known. A rumble is heard in the distance; the hurrying clatter of horses feet; two chariots, each drawn by four galloping horses, plunge into view; the animals, with outstretched necks, and dilated nostrils, urged on by Ben-Hur and Messala, thunder down the course. The chariots rumble and sway. Now Hur is ahead,—now Messala,—then Hur again,—and the race is won.

The last scene is a fitting climax to the brilliant stage pictures. It represents the Vale of Hinnom, which becomes transparent, revealing the Mount of Olives and the City of Jerusalem. Great multitudes come out to greet the Nazarene singing hymns of praise and adoration, but the Christ's personality is not represented. His presence is indicated by a great shaft of white light, which tradition says was reflected from His person. Ben-Hur, his mother, and sister and united, and a great chorus of thanksgiving bursts forth as the curtain falls.

Sound Advice
Anne Steese Richardson gives some pertinent advice to girls looking for employment, in the May Woman's Home Companion. "Tell the employer," she says, "what you think you can do, not what you have done at home or in school, nor why you need the position. He wants to know whether you can write legibly, spell correctly, figure accurately and are strong enough to serve him so many hours a day, so many days a week. If this man has his own and his employer's interests at heart he will regard you as he does a bolt of fine silk on the shelves outside his office. This sounds almost brutal. It sounds as if you were no better than the dry goods upon the shelf. Well, when you get right down to facts, that employer is taking just as great a chance in hiring you, an untrained girl whom he must train at his firm's expense, as he is in buying a bolt of silk that may or may not find favor with the firm's customers. If you do the work, he is glad to pay you the money you need. If you cannot do the work, then perhaps for a second he feels sorry for you, but he argues that a charity organization to which his firm contributes should look after your case. A store, factory or office is a beehive of industry, not a refuge for incompetents in distress."

The Knock-out Blow.

The blow which knocked out Corbet was a revelation to the prize fighters. From the earliest days of the ring the knock-out blow was aimed for the jaw, the temple or the jugular vein. Stomach punches were thrown in to worry and weary the fighter, but if a scientific man had told one of the old fighters that the most vulnerable spot was the region of the stomach, he'd have laughed at him for an ignoramus. Dr. Pierce is bringing home to the public a parallel fact; that the stomach is the most vulnerable organ out of the prize ring as well as in it. We protect our heads, throats, feet and lungs, but the stomach we are utterly indifferent to, until disease finds the solar plexus and knocks us out. Make your stomach sound and strong by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you protect yourself in your most vulnerable spot. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures "weak stomach," indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, bad, thin and impure blood and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" has a specific curative effect upon all mucous surfaces and hence cures catarrh, no matter where located or what stage it may have reached. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to cleanse the passages with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy fluid while using the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy. Why the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures catarrhal diseases, as of the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs will be plain to you if you will read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This booklet gives all the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines from which it will be seen that they contain not a drop of alcohol, pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead. Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

Buttermilk Ice Cream

If you have never tasted ice cream made of buttermilk there is a most agreeable sensation in store for you. To a pint of buttermilk add a pint of cream and half a pound of lump sugar in which has been rubbed lemons until well flavored. After putting this mixture into the freezer add the juice of two lemons, just as it begins to freeze. When serving ice cream in cold weather it is nice to pass around a pitcher of hot chocolate or caramel sauce, to be poured over it just as it is eaten. This sauce is sometimes served in tiny cups, into which the spoonful of ice cream may be dipped on its way to the mouth.—Ladies' World.

CATARRH A GERM DISEASE

Success of Hyomei Guaranteed by F. W. Jordan.

Catarrh is not a blood disease, but is caused by germs that lodge and grow in the air passages, causing irritation with poisonous and offensive mucous discharges. It is an insidious disease of most destructive tendency. Its approaches are unalarming, and its victims are well on the road to a chronic state or to dread consumption before they realize their danger.

Stomach dosing is ineffective in the treatment of catarrh. The only healing agent is Hyomei, which is inhaled with the air you breathe, killing all catarrhal germs and driving them from the system.

The sooner you use Hyomei the sooner you will be free of catarrh. F. W. Jordan will sell you a dollar outfit with the understanding that if it does not give satisfaction your money will be refunded. April 24-25.

Hot Stove—Cool Kitchen

How do you expect to endure the broiling days of summer if you prepare all the food over a glowing coal fire?

You need a "New Perfection" Oil Stove that will do the cooking without cooking the cook. It concentrates plenty of heat under the pot and diffuses little or none through the room. Therefore, when working with the

CARDS HIS DOWNFALL

One of Many Examples Given by Dr. Chapman at Philadelphia.

In an article which I published in The Gazette on gambling about one year ago, I used these words: "I am of the opinion that many of the professional gamblers learned their first lesson in gambling under the roofs of their own parents and in fashionable society. I shudder at the fearful weight of responsibility that must rest upon those persons who, perhaps unwittingly, have been the contributory cause in sending so many young souls adrift into eternity."

These ominous words have been fearfully verified in the subjoined statement made by Rev. W. F. Chapman during the recent revival in Philadelphia. The remarkable story is vouched for by a friend of Dr. Chapman who wrote him the facts, which the doctor read one day at the Garrick. It ran thus:

"While a well-known evangelist was conducting a meeting one morning, a tramp came in and said: 'My father and mother used to sit in this pew. My father was an officer in this church. Seven boys used to sit in this pew in the Sunday school class. We had a great love and respect for our Sunday school teacher.'

"Saturday afternoon she invited us to her home for an entertainment of music, eatables and a look over the lesson. After a while she was anxious to please us and hold us, and she taught the names of cards. We became enthusiastic, learning different games. After a while we were off in the cotton gins playing cards and not going to her home.

"Later we failed to go to Sunday school. Cards, cigarettes and after a while drink and gambling. We all at different times left our homes.

"Two of those boys have been hung, three are in state's prison for life, one a vagabond like myself. No one knows where he is and if the authorities knew I was here I would be arrested and put behind the bars."

"As he stood there heartbroken, a lady at the right and near the pulpit, dressed in mourning, arose, went to where the man was, fell on the floor and cried: 'My God, I am the teacher that did it.' She fainted and we did not know but what she was dead. She revived. The woman was not seen in the meeting any more and the man was never seen again."

A day after reading this letter at the theatre, Dr. Chapman received the following letter from a business man who had been present, showing how the truth had gone home to his heart:

Lesson Strikes Home

"Dr. Chapman, I want to thank you for something God used you to do for me today at the Garrick. While I know that I am a Christian, I have always had cards in the house, and occasionally played, but they had no particular attraction, and I sincerely and honestly say that I never saw harm in having them or playing them as we did.

But your story of the teacher and her boys today opened my eyes, as well as my wife's (who unknown to me was in the gallery of the theatre), and tonight when we got home we burned all of the cards."

Cash Prizes for Good Fiction

The Bohemian, Deposit, N. Y., a bright and entertaining monthly which has been making a place for itself, is in the field with several substantial cash prizes for good fiction. The editors of The Bohemian are convinced that there are hundreds of people in this country who have a good story to tell if only they are induced to put themselves upon paper. It is to bring out these stories from what source so ever that next month particulars of the cash offer for prizes will be printed in The Outing Press publications: The Bohemian and The Outing Magazine.

This offer means that The Bohemian is offering especial encouragement to those outside of the field of professional writing. The best story will of course win, by whom ever submitted, whether he be a professional story writer or not. But unless The Bohemian is much mistaken, some of the prizes will be awarded to writers whose names have never before appeared in print.

What Science Doesn't Know

One of these mornings, when there has drifted over the fields a Presence, which the ancients called the Angel of Rain—you awaken to find every orchard, every lilac bush, all the wild fruit trees of the woods aflame with lights the color of a cataract in sunshine. The air is bewitched with the perfume of a thousand orchards, and when the bloom hangs in mid-air like great flakes of snow-shower, you can hear the hum of an invading army—the bees harvesting the first fruits of the year. Do plants feel? Do they see? Do they know? Else why did they waken to life just at day-dawn with a beauty like the incense of a morning sacrifice to a Sun-God? Science can't answer that question. In fact, it took a long time to learn just at what moment the simplest things of the farm do bloom, like wheat for instance, whose tiny florets open to life just at sun dawn; or to be accurate, in northern latitudes, between four and five. All science knows is that a something in the sun compels and woos and wakens a something in the slumbering life of the flower; and religion itself can't give a very much better explanation of human worship. As I said before, everything is doing something in spring, if it is only the dumb worship of the flower world at day dawn.—From "The New Spirit of the Farm," by Agnes C. Laut, in The Outing Magazine for May.

EXCELLENT SERMON

Delivered to Graduating Class Sunday Evening by

REV. HENRY B. TOWNSEND

Large Congregation Hear Forceful Answer to the Question "What Is Your Life?"

Sunday evening, April 26, a large crowd gathered in Assembly Hall to hear Rev. H. B. Townsend, pastor of the Presbyterian church, deliver the baccalaureate sermon to the class of '08. On the text, "What is Your Life," James 4: 14, he spoke as follows:

A man's character is revealed not determined by the questions he asks, and this Apostolic question which I bring you tonight is Man's question in every age, race and clime. And the answer you give will reveal your heart, and will make life worth living or make it a great disaster. For we are standing before the great Sphinx of Life, as living interrogations, asking this question first of all; and though we may receive no answer from the stony lips, we may have response from earth and sea and sky.

As the child places the shell at his ear and hears, as he thinks, the faint murmur of the distant sea beating on the shore, yet learns that it is the rhythmic rushing of his own heart's blood flooding artery and vein, so, perhaps, the best answer to this question will come from your own hearts and so reveal you.

Science for centuries has asked this question. Herbert Spencer gives an answer in 200 words (many of which have six or seven syllables) which only a philosopher could grasp, and we pass it by as too scientific. The Bible makes the question personal, practical and so important! So it comes to you, who tonight on the threshold of the future—hear the words—What is your life—to be? I might answer for you, "What you desire," or, "what you make it." I am not with those who say that life is merely a preparation for death. Nay! All earth-life is a preparation for life! You have now spent ten years in the schools preparing for life—in the busy world, but all your years on earth so far have been preparation. We therefore call this period—the Commencement of your life, orb and spherical. Every day, hour, lesson of your school life has had this day in view, and so your commencement is a joyous period to you—as all beginnings are. But what will your life be? What is it?

The world has its answers: "Life is a short journey from the cradle to the casket, over many waters, under many skies." The question is, what direction? What is the Trend of your life? Philosophers answer—that life is a trust—and men are trustees; entrusted with talents, two or 10; pounds, one or five; and you are expected, therefore, to use this wealth, compound the interest and secure approval.

Nature has placed our eyes in the front that we might look forward, to see the way we take, the goal at last. But your purpose determines the trend or direction it will take. The Greeks called man "Anthropos"—because of this foresight—a token of excellence. It distinguishes manhood as higher than childhood. "Enough for the day" is the child's desire; present pleasure weighs more than future profit. All the earth's sweet songbirds in the forest or bush are as nothing to the little brown sparrow in youth's hand today. But manhood has pre-vision, takes a view of future possibilities and governs itself accordingly. This fore-look distinguishes civilized from savage in life or nation. With the savage today's feast outweighs tomorrow's victory. So he has no future. But the trained, civilized, educated man takes larger views of life. He sacrifices the present for the future, and the future is his. This will likewise distinguish men of the same nation into grades—and so classifies them. Some men succeed—acquire wealth, place, power, looking forward; some think only of today's use, pleasure, profit. They eat the loaf today; why save to plant it for tomorrow's multiplied harvest? Some deny themselves rest and comfort now to win future success. But sufficient to the day is all these others ask—Why trouble about tomorrow? And yet—

"Wherefore praise we famous men From whose bays we borrow? They that put aside today,— All the joys of their Today,— And with toils of their Today— Bought for us—Tomorrow?"

Earth's greatest and most heroic men are those who have looked at life with large vision and thus thought of the completed circle, and not the small segment of today. They thus sacrifice Today—as seed of joy, rest, honor—for Tomorrow's harvest of happiness and success. They live the rounded, the spherical life, and succeed in all their plans.

A novelist has the plan and outline of his tale all sketched out before he writes the fame-winning story. So must every man, to be successful, have the ideal and plan of life in his mind, and work it out. What then is your vision of life? Your theory? Your scheme? That for which you are striving, enduring, laboring, sacrificing? It is this ideal, this fore-look that determines what life shall be. In the wondrous loom of life wherein is being woven the tapestry which we call our existence, there is a design or pattern after which the weaver works, otherwise life would be merely a crazy quilt.

Look then at life in its facts, scenes, experiences; with its laws, physical, mental, moral, social! Behold man's body, this wondrous organism, fire and clay, with its purposes, functions, possibilities! We move on through life as planets through space; each man a micro-

Keep dry supplies in glass preserve jars, labeled.

Have sewing implements at hand for dressing fowls—strong cotton, celluloid thimble, tape, twine, needle and scissors.

Keep a roll of cheesecloth for bags and strainers.

Cotton cloth for pudding and dumpling bags will be needed; also bands for binding the beef roast.

A big apron, a basin of warm water and towels are essentials.

Sugar, flour, soap and starch can be bought in large quantities at a saving, for they will not spoil.

Perishable things, like cornmeal, oatmeal, codfish, raisins, olive oil and potted and canned goods had best be purchased in small lots.

The trouble with most cough cures is that they constipate. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup does not constipate, but on the other hand its laxative principles gently move the bowels. ## Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

THE Princess Virginia

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Rosemary in Search of a Father," Etc.

Egon was genuinely astonished at this turn of the conversation, as he had been carefully arming himself against a personal attack from any one of several directions. He sat pointing the sharp ends of his mustache one after the other and trying to remember some striking incident with which to adorn a more or less accurate narrative.

"What would you call useful?" he inquired at last.

The chancellor answered, but indirectly. "Has the emperor been playing the fool at Lyndalberg these last few days?"

"Do you want to make me guilty of leze majesty?" Egon raised his eyebrows, but he was recovering presence of mind. "If by playing the fool, though, you mean falling in love, why, then, brother, I should say he had done little else during the three days, and perhaps even the first of those was not the beginning."

The chancellor growled out a word which he would hardly have uttered in the imperial presence, particularly in the connection he suggested. "Let me hear exactly what has been going on from day's end to day's end," he commanded.

Egon grew thoughtful once more. Clearly here was the explanation of the summons. He was to be let off easily, it appeared. But, suspense relieved, he was not ready to be satisfied with negative blessings.

"Are you sure it isn't a bit like telling tales out of school?" he objected.

"Schoolboys, with empty pockets have been known to do that," said the chancellor. "But perhaps your pockets aren't empty—eh?"

"They're in a chronic state of emptiness," groaned Egon.

"On the 15th day of October your quarterly allowance will be paid," remarked his brother. "I would increase the installment by the amount of 5,000 gulden if it would make it worth your while to talk and forget nothing but your scruples."

"Oh, you know I'm always delighted to please you!" exclaimed Egon. "It's only natural, living the monotonous life you do when you're not busy with the affairs of state, that you should like to hear what goes on in the world outside. Of course I'll gladly do my best as a raconteur."

"My dear young man, don't lie," said the chancellor. "The habit is growing on you. You lie even to yourself. By and by you'll believe yourself, and then all hope for your soul will be over. What I want to know is how far the emperor has gone in his infatuation for this English girl. I'm not afraid to speak plainly to you, so you may safely—and profitably—do the same with me. In the first place, I'll put you at your ease by making a humiliating confession. The other night the woman Von Lyndal tried to 'draw me,' as she would express it, on this subject, and I'm bitterly mortified to say she partly succeeded. She suggested an entanglement between Leopold and the girl. I replied that Leopold wasn't the man to pull down a hornet's nest of gossip around the ears of a young woman who had saved his life. No matter what his inclinations might be, I insisted that he would pay her no repeated visits."

"This thrust the fair Mechtilde parried as if repeating a mere rumor by saying that she believed the girl was to stay at the country house of some old friend of the emperor. At the time I attached little importance to her chatter, believing that she merely wished to give me a spiteful slap or two, as is her habit when she has the chance. For once, though, she has succeeded in stealing a march upon me, and she kept the secret of her plan until too late for me to have any hope of preventing Leopold from fulfilling his engagement at her house. After that was safely arranged I don't doubt she was overjoyed that I should guess her plot."

"Do you think that even if you'd known sooner you could have stopped the emperor from visiting at Lyndalberg?" asked Egon. "I know that you are iron, but he is steel."

"I would have stopped him," returned the chancellor. "I should have made no bones about the reason, for I've found that the best way with Leopold is to blurt out the whole truth and fight him—my experience against his will. If advice and warning hadn't sufficed to restrain him from insulting the girl who is to be his wife and injuring the reputation of the girl who never can be, I would have devised some expedient to thwart him for his own good. I'm not a man to give up when I feel that I'm right."

"Neither is he," Egon added, "but since you seem so determined to nip this dainty blossom of love in the bud we'll hope it's not yet too late for a sharp frost to blight it."

"I sent for you," said the chancellor, brushing away metaphor with an impatient gesture, "to show me the precise spot on which to lay my finger."

"I'll do my best to deserve your confidence," responded Egon gracefully. "Let me see—where shall I begin?"

Well, as you know, it's simpler for the emperor to see a good deal of the woman he admires at a friend's house than almost anywhere else in his own country. This particular woman risked her life to save his, and it's so natural for him to be gracious in return that people would be surprised if he were not. There's so much in their favor at the commencement.

"Miss Mowbray and her mother arrived at Lyndalberg before the emperor, had made friends there and were ready for the campaign. The girl is undoubtedly beautiful—the prettiest creature, I think, I ever saw—and she has a winning way which takes with women as well as men. Not one of her fellow guests seems to put a wrong construction on her flirtation with the emperor or his with her. The other men would think him blind if he didn't admire her as much as they do, and none of the women there are of the sort to be jealous. So, are you sure, Lorenz, that you're not taking too serious a view of the affair?"

"It can't be taken too seriously, considering the circumstances. I've told you my plans for the emperor's future. Princesses are women, and gossip is hydra headed. When the lady hears—she who has been allowed to understand that the emperor of Rhaetia only waits for a suitable opportunity of formally asking for her hand—for she will surely hear, that he has seized this very moment for his first liaison, I tell you neither she nor her people are likely to accept the statement meekly. She's half German—on her father's side a cousin not too distant of William II. She's half English—on her mother's side related to the king through the line of the Stuarts. And in her there's a dash of American blood which comes from a famous grandmother who was descended from George Washington, a man as proud and with the right to be as proud as any king. All three countries would have reason to resent such an ungallant slight from Rhaetia."

"The little affair must be hushed up," said Egon.

"It must be stopped, and at once," said the chancellor.

"Ach!" sighed the young man, with as much meaning in the long drawn breath as the elder might care to read. And if it did not discourage it at least irritated him. "Go on!" he exclaimed sharply. "Go on with your sorry tale!"

"After all, when one comes to the telling, there isn't a very great deal one can put into cut and dried words," explained Egon. "At table the emperor has his hostess on one side and his fair preserver on the other. The two talk as much together during meals as etiquette allows and perhaps a little more. Then, as the emperor has been often at Lyndalberg, he can act as cicerone for a stranger. He has shown Miss Mowbray all the beauties of the place. He gathers her roses in the rose garden; he has guided her through the grottoes; he has piloted her through the labyrinth; he has told her which are the best dogs in the kennels and has given her the history of all the horses in the baron's stables. I know this from the table talk. He has explored the lake with Miss Mowbray and her mother in a motor boat. Perhaps you saw the party? And, whether or no he brought his automobile to Lyndalberg on purpose, in any case he's had the Mowbrays out in it several times already. One would hardly think he could have found a chance to do so much in such a short time, but our emperor is a man of action. Yesterday we had a picnic at the Seebach-fall to see Thorwaldsen's Undine. Leopold and Miss Mowbray, being splendid climbers, reached the statue on the height over the fall long before the rest of us. At starting, however, I was close behind with the baroness and overheard some joke between the two about a mountain and a cow. The emperor spoke of making as a fine art and said he'd lately been taking lessons. They laughed a great deal at this, and it was plain that they were on terms of comradeship. When a young man and a girl have a secret understanding, even the most innocent one, it puts them apart from others."

"Last night there were fireworks on the lake. The emperor and Miss Mowbray watched them together, for everything was conducted most informally. Afterward we had an impromptu cotillion, with three or four pretty new figures invented by the baroness. The emperor gave Miss Mowbray several favors, and one was a buckle of enameled fetters. This morning there was tennis. The emperor and Miss Mowbray played together. They were both so skillful it was a pleasure to watch them. At luncheon they ate a double almond out of one shell, had a game over it, and Leopold caught Miss Mowbray napping. That brings us to the moment of my coming to you. For the afternoon I fancy the baroness was getting up a riding party, and this evening, unless they're too tired, she'll perhaps get up an amateur concert at which Miss Mowbray will sing. The girl has a delicious voice."

"The creature must be a fool or an adventuress," pronounced the chancellor.

lor. "If she has kept her senses she ought to know that nothing can come of this folly—except sorrow or scandal."

Egon shrugged his stilly padded military shoulders. "I have always found that a woman in love doesn't stop to count the cost."

"So! You fancy her 'in love' with the emperor?"

"With the man rather than the emperor, if I'm a judge of character." "Which you're not!" Iron Heart brusquely disposed of that suggestion. "The merest schoolgirl could pull the wool over your eyes if she cared to take the trouble."

"This one doesn't care a rap. She hardly knows that I exist."

"Humph!" The chancellor's eyes appraised his young brother's features. "That's a pity. You might have tried cutting the emperor out. Her affair with him can have no happy ending, while you, in spite of all your faults, with your good looks, our position and my money, wouldn't be a bad match for an ambitious girl."

"Your money?" "I mean should I choose to make you my heir, and I would choose if you married to please me. Who are these Mowbrays?"

"I haven't had the curiosity to inquire into their antecedents," said Egon. "I only know that they're ladies, that they must be of some consequence in their own country or they couldn't have got the letters of introduction they have and that the girl is the prettiest on earth."

"Mechtilde talked to me, I remember, a good deal about those letters of introduction," the chancellor reflected aloud. "But Rhaetia is a long cry from England, and letters might be forged. I've known such things to be done. Fetch me a big red volume you'll find on the third shelf from the floor at the left of the south window. You can't miss it. It's Burke's Peerage."

Egon rose with alacrity to obey. He was rather thoughtful, for his brother had put an entirely new and exciting idea into his head.

Presently the red volume was discovered and laid on the desk before the chancellor, who turned the leaves over until he found the page desired. As his eye fell upon the long line of Mowbray's face changed, and the bristling brows came together in a grizzled line. Apparently the women were not adventuresses, at least in the ordinary acceptance of the term.

There they were. His square tipped finger pressed down upon the printed names with a dig that might have signified his disposition toward their representatives.

"The girl's mother is the widow of Reginald, sixth Baron Mowbray," the old man muttered half aloud; "son, Reginald Edward, fifteen years of age; daughter, Helen Augusta, twenty-eight. Aha! She's no chicken, this young lady. She ought to be a woman of the world."

"Twenty-eight!" replied Egon. "I'll eat my hat if she's twenty-eight."

"Doesn't she look it by daylight?"

"Not an hour over nineteen; might be younger. Jove, I was never so surprised to learn a woman's age! By the bye, I heard her telling Baron von Lyndal last night, apropos of our great Rhaetian victory, that she was eleven years old on the day it took place. That would make her about twenty now. When she spoke I remember she gave a look at her mother across the room as though she were frightened. I suppose she was hoping there was no copy of this big red book at Lyndalberg."

"That thought might have been in her mind," assented the chancellor, "or else she"—He left his sentence unfinished and sat with unseeing eyes fixed in an owl stare on the open page of Burke.

"I should like to know if you really meant what you said about my marriage a little while ago"—Egon ventured to attract his brother's attention—"because if you did—"

"If I did—"

"I might try very hard to please you in my choice of a wife."

"Be a little more explicit. You mean you would try to prove to Miss Mowbray that a captain of cavalry in the hand is worth an emperor in the bush—a bramble bush at that, eh?"

"Yes; I would do my best. And, as you say, I'm not without advantages." "You are not. I was on the point of suggesting that you made the most of them in Miss Mowbray's eyes until you brought me this red book."

The large forefinger tapped the page of Mowbrays, while two lines which might have meant amusement or a sneer scored themselves on either side of the chancellor's mouth.

"And now you've changed your mind?" There was disappointment in Egon's voice.

"I don't say that. I say only wait. Make yourself as agreeable to the lady as you like. But don't pledge yourself, and don't count upon my promise or my money until you hear again. By that time—well, we shall see what we shall see. Keep your hand in. But wait—wait."

"How long am I to wait? If the thing's to be done at all it must be done soon, for meanwhile the emperor makes all the running." The chancellor looked up again from the red book, his first stiff covering the Mowbrays as if they were to be extinguished. "You are to wait," he said, "until I've had answers to a couple of telegrams I shall send tonight."

Orris For Washing

Almost every one knows that clear orris root imparts a scent of violets, and that it is not as expensive as it was formerly. Either the whole root or the powdered may be used, and once the perfume has made its way into the woods of chiffoniers and dressing tables everything kept there will be sweet. Girls who like extremely dainty scents will find that a bit of the root boiled with handkerchiefs and stocks after the latter are washed will make them exquisite.

Bees and Clover

Every head of clover consists of about sixty flower tubes, each of which contains an infinitesimal quantity of sugar. Bees will often visit a hundred heads of clover before retiring to the hive, and in order to obtain the sugar necessary for a load must, therefore, thrust their tongues into about 6,000 different flowers. A bee will make twenty trips a day when the clover patch is convenient to the hive, and thus draw sugar from 120,000 different flowers in a single day's work.

Get Out Old Combs

Do you remember the high, carved tortoise shell comb which grandmother used to wear in your childhood days? If so, get her to give it to you. If she has forgotten where she put it years ago, ransack her belongings till you find it.

It is just what you want to set off your own elaborately-dressed hair this season of 1908, and make you envied of all the girls whose combs, though smart, perhaps bejeweled, are not heirlooms.

The Democratic ticket recently nominated, which we print for the first time this week, is a strong and worthy one, and most of the candidates were sought by the office, as should be the case.

The Republican State Convention at Harrisburg on Wednesday revealed the fact that Penrose is still the centre of the Republican constellation, and lesser luminaries who attempted to leave the outlined orbit were quickly eclipsed.

REYNOLDS AGAINST ROOSEVELT

Four years ago when John M. Reynolds was a candidate he was glad to attach himself to the Roosevelt kite-string. In that campaign and in the campaign of two years ago he boasted of the leadership of Roosevelt and pledged himself to assist in carrying out the ideas of the leader.

If, during the present session of Congress, there was one measure above all others in which President Roosevelt was interested, it was the authorization of the construction of four battleships. So important did he consider the matter that he sent to Congress a special message, urging the construction. "The House was in 'committee of the whole' on the Naval Appropriations bill," says the Philadelphia Inquirer, "and no roll call was in order, so that the members who defied the Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy escaped going on record."

In his plea for four battleships Representative Longworth called attention to the fact that "practically every member on this (the Republican) side of the House made it his special plea for election that he would stand by the President."

Among the seven Pennsylvania Republicans who voted against the President and his measure to "provide for the common defences" was Hon. John M. Reynolds of Bedford.

It is true that the more money is spent on building up a navy, the less there is for sending Congressmen on pleasure trips to Alaska and our island possessions.

William H. Burns

William H. Burns of Woodbury, died at Los Angeles, Cal., on April 24, aged 36 years. He had been engaged in the hotel business at Pittsburgh until last summer, when his health failed. After spending some time with his mother he went west in the hope of being benefited by the change of climate but was about to return home when his death occurred. His mother and one brother, Blanton, both residing at Woodbury, survive. The body arrived on Tuesday and funeral services were held on Wednesday, conducted by Revs. Sharp and Dutt. Deceased was a member of the I. O. O. F. of Woodbury and the U. P. O. E. of Pittsburgh.

CLASS OF 1908

shows that he is wonderfully endowed by his Creator. Although he may plan a career that is plausible in reason and in his imagination may be grand and brilliant, his life cannot be termed a success nor can he reach the goal of his ambitions unless he brings strong will power into play to direct his determination.

Every deed that has been worthy of note in the history of the world has been accomplished by the efforts of those who had in their minds and purposes the determination to win. All the great and good characters that we study of in our histories gained and held their high stations in life simply by sheer determination and purpose. Thus, during the Revolutionary War when success seemed impossible, we see Washington's determination and courage inspire his small army of untrained men to victory.

Many of us to whom it is allotted to lead the common life do not realize how important it is that we constantly make use of all the will power we can muster into play. Every individual, no matter how lowly his occupation, must bear his share of the world's responsibility.

Yet, if we look about us we see in the rank and file of the common people of our land men and women whose lives count for little or nothing; they constitute a class of dependents who cannot manage to supply the simple needs of existence. Some one will say, "Perhaps they started out in life under discouraging circumstances;" another will say, "They never had a chance, or, on account of sickness, it was impossible for them to eke out a living." These excuses are all very plausible and perhaps in many cases they are applicable. It is the duty of the world at least to treat them with charity.

But in our day of enlightenment, what is in store for the individual, what have circumstances to do with one's career? That poverty and sickness do not necessarily determine that our lives cannot be a success has been proved by many noble examples. Abraham Lincoln was a poor boy and had not the opportunity of attending school, yet he received an education because he was willing to work during the day and spend his evenings in study. He was willing to perform faithfully the humblest duty and this, with his determination to succeed, won for him the highest position his country could bestow upon him.

We can find no better example of what a strong will can do in battling with disease than is furnished by the life of Sidney Lanier. Although suffering intensely from consumption he fought death off for seven years and during that time gave to the world many of his best poems. Milton, in his blindness, produced a Paradise Lost; Prescott, in partial blindness, studied ancient records and became an authority on history. Phoebe Cary and Elizabeth Barrett Browning, though invalids, made their names immortal in verse.

There is record of hundreds of souls among the great, who suffered the pangs and ills to which the flesh is heir, yet through perseverance and courage they succeeded in warding off death and lived lives of service, producing works of lasting character. It seems that to those who suffer most in their toil life is sweetest, and they leave to the world a rich legacy of works as a monument to their efforts. But we need not go among those whom the world has accorded places of distinction to be convinced that who wills can; we see it illustrated every day of our lives. Indeed it is the foundation of simple life and duty.

He who wins in healthful work and play has done so because he so willed that his efforts should not be fruitless. He who on small earnings has succeeded in bringing the common comforts into his own home has done so because he has willingly consented to be responsible to his loved ones. He who in struggling against evil passions and temptations has succeeded in living a moral and righteous life can attribute it to the help of God and his own determination. Few things come to us by chance; all things, whether material or spiritual, must be secured by honest effort. In all honest effort must be put all the will power and courage that human agency can muster. Opportunities for life and works lie open for us; by Nature we are endowed with powers.

The state warrants the protection of life and property from wrongdoers. She establishes institutions and offers learning free of charge. The church offers salvation without money and without price. And though we do not all possess ten talents we have the privilege to develop at least one talent.

History and our own experience has taught us that those who have wasted time and opportunities are freighted with discouragement and life is marked with failure. But history furnishes innumerable examples, and experience has taught us that courage maintained by those who will fills life with worthy deeds.

The Mantle Oration, delivered by J. George Jordan, follows:

Classmates: On receiving this mantle a year ago we assumed the responsibilities of seniors. Now we are about to place the mantle of seniority upon the shoulders of our successors. Reluctantly we give it up and relinquish the position it signifies.

Fellow students of 1909, you are entering upon the last and best year of your course, the capstone of the structure you have been rearing. It will sum up, bind together, and give a purpose to all that has gone before. May this honored mantle symbolize to you your duty. Keep it without spot or blemish; wear it like heroes, and remember that the first great work, the task performed by few, is that you yourself may to yourself be true.

"The Victories of Peace" was the topic chosen for the Valedictory by Miss Abigail Blackburn, which follows:

The truth that peace has its glories and its victories has long lain hidden in the pages of history and been blotted out of the chronicles of achievement, and he who would dare take up its cause must die unknown and unsung. But a new era has dawned and upon us, the people of this era, this truth has forced itself with greater emphasis until we cannot but heed it and study its great lesson.

The idea of peace is vague and indefinite and can best be clearly viewed against the darker background of continuous warfare and strife. Few strongly marked instances of the immediate results of peace can be found, yet its influence spreads slowly but widely, and in the revolution of centuries it takes its place as an important factor in the development of the race of man.

War, in its broader sense, has existed from the earliest time of which we have historic record; it was the principal outlet for all the brutal activities and animating passions that dominated the life of primitive man. It was the sole means of defense, acquisition and extension of authority. The war spirit has entered into the building and destruction of nations more than any other one element. Man has spent his energies and taxed his genius and ability to a greater extent for the pursuit of war than for anything else. Fleets, armies and military equipments have always been the result of his most advanced scientific knowledge. The first consideration of rulers and lawmakers for ages past has been the possibility of war and how to meet it. In the great national constitutions the articles concerning war are the most numerous. Heroes have been reared, nations divided, and great questions settled all by the means of war.

Primitive man used this power of force to protect himself from the wild beasts, but when tribe came in contact with tribe there was continuous conflict. Thus we find the ancient kingdoms of Egypt, Chaldea, Assyria, and Persia constantly swayed to and fro in strife. And so, as war was the first general occupation and was regarded as the noblest calling of man, it was only natural that our first great literature, science, art, music and incidents of heroism and adventure should be produced in this passionate age of the war spirit. Thus we owe much of the present condition of the world to war.

Can we expect that the influence of peace which spreads so slowly and so quietly is so marked or so important? Dare we advocate it and hope that it may result in lasting good? Yet the story of peace is old, too, and simply waits to be told. The "peace of centuries past" was indeed but a mockery of the real meaning that we hold who have been taught by the Great Teacher that the true spirit of peace involves humility, generosity and love. By the coming of this Teacher the civilized world has undergone a change and has spent less of its time since then in warfare than in all the preceding time. The history of bloodshed and of men daring in battle is still read with interest and even with pleasure by many, but side by side with this stand the histories of arbitration, exploration, commerce, and enlightenment and the biographies of such men as Saul of Tarsus, Alfred the Great, Shakespeare, Gladstone, Lincoln, and Edison. Along these lines and in the production of such men as mentioned, peace indeed has won victories.

Little or nothing was known of the world outside of central Europe, northern Africa, and western Asia until the fifteenth century, after the wars of the Crusades had spent their energies and Europe was in comparative peace. America and a new route to India were discovered and Europe became the colonizer of the new world under such conditions. The present is an age of exploration and we hope soon to see the regions of the extreme north and south and the wilds of Africa and South America open to us. Yet this could not be hoped for unless as a people we are at peace and have become interested in opening up the unknown portions of the earth.

That noble institution, the public school, has proved to be one of our greatest aids in the furtherance of peace. And this has developed with the most rapid strides in the last two centuries, when knowledge of men and of industry has been in greater demand than knowledge of war. In times of peace men desire something better, something higher than experience and a life devoted to strife calls for, and they find it in the public schools, colleges and universities.

A people enjoying peace need not seek the honors and esteem of foreign nations, for they are theirs by right and are always admired and respected. Their credit abroad is good, their commerce increases, their home industries progress and they enjoy prosperity. It is said that along the line of science and the arts, and hence along the line of invention and discovery, that the world has made more progress in the nineteenth century than in all the preceding ages. The very elements of nature have been conquered and made the servants to man's will. But this has been wrought in the time of the greatest peace, for as this kind of progress can be only the result of long, persistent and studious toil it would be impossible for an age of turmoil to afford either the time or the opportunity for its people to devote their energies to seeking out nature's truths.

Literature has reached its climax in periods of peace, and leaves its purest and best as lasting memorials to its time. It is true that war has produced its passionate outbursts of song and story but these appeal but for the hour, while the finer and more philosophical productions remain the standards.

The idea of nations meeting and settling their differences without bloodshed is not new, but that this idea can actually be carried out and be of substantial benefit has only lately been proved. The fact that nations are willing to submit their disputes to an international court and abide by its just decision shows a great world advancement toward higher civilization. Two international peace congresses have been held, and although the people there represented have not consented to total disarmament, they have met on friendly ground; they have shown a stronger spirit of concession to each other, and are proving by their very presence there that they recognize the value of peace. Four hundred years ago an international court of justice or an international congress of peace could not have been established, for these are only the institutions of an educated and peace-seeking people.

And what influence can these bettered conditions of national life have upon the individual or domestic life of the masses? The home life, the very foundation of the race, is broadened by education; its families live with a greater confidence and dependence upon each other; their labors are devoted to something more than their own protection; their finances prosper; they can enjoy nature's blessings together in their own green fields and around their own bright hearthstone. If these are some of the victories of peace are they worth winning?

The most that can be said of the victories of war is that power, territory and plunder are gained while arbitration is not thought of; exploration and civilization are neglected; institutions of learning are unattended; credit abroad suffers; business fails; literature is unwritten; refinement and culture are supplanted by brutality and ignorance, and the home is destroyed and desolated. War is an historical fact and should be studied not as something unavoidable and even admirable as it is so often presented to us, but as something horrible, criminal and very often avoidable. Those excellent characters that have participated in war appeal to us with those qualities that have been cultivated, not in the midst of war but in times of peace. No people have passed successfully through a crisis without some one having risen to face the situation and having been able to master it. And that mastering power must be the product of experience acquired when affairs were less critical.

Thus we know that peace is right since it has raised the standard of human society, and that war is wrong for lowering that standard. But more than this, peace is a policy today as well as a principle. No two nations can go into modern warfare without the expenditure of millions of dollars, the loss of thousands of human lives and a general business depression. Japan learned this lesson when she was reduced to famine at the close of the war with Russia. Too much must be spent for what is gained. It has been found more profitable to strengthen the country with factories, canals, railroads, churches, schools and libraries, than with forts, fleets and armies. And who are the promoters of the cause of peace? The few great men and women who have won fame and success in establishing order and tranquility are among them, but to meet with success they must have their countrymen supporting them with their industry, their patriotism and their common sense. These followers are the builders of the works of peace.

The whole world movement has been toward peace, slow indeed, but lasting in its grip, and it bids fair to build characters, nations and a race stronger than ever before, and if it should continue to grow we may only hope that some day its reign may be supreme.

One of the greatest blessings that we realize from this general peace movement so long in progress is that individuals may devote a due portion of life to gaining enlightenment. These exercises and similar exercises throughout our land signify the culmination of efforts in this direction. By pursuing the course of study laid down in our common schools we are enabled to understand the conditions that make for peace.

Classmates, the years of study and anxiety that we have spent within these walls have united us in the enjoyment of this final occasion. Tomorrow we separate and each will assume new duties, but we will ever be united in pleasant recollections of our schooldays, and we will cherish our Alma Mater and carry with us a deep appreciation for the community that has provided us the opportunities that we have enjoyed and for the interest those in authority have taken in our welfare.

The time has come when we must say good-bye and place the experiences and pleasures of schooldays with the past. Reluctantly we give them up and with sad hearts we break these ties, but with the assurance that memory shall hold for each a store of pleasant recollections we can say our last farewell.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN!

The false, ridiculous and malicious rumors circulated in Bedford during the month past cause me to publish the annexed:

Bedford, Pa., Aug. 18th, 1893.

We, the undersigned mechanics, having been employed on the Oppenheimer store building and being thoroughly conversant with the construction of same, herewith declare "that beyond a doubt said building is as strong and safe as any building in Bedford and in fact far stronger than most."

This declaration is offered voluntarily and considered by us a duty to make to contradict reports and rumors passing around town for many years. The fact that representatives of the Underwriters Association of the U. S. made a thorough examination of the building as long ago as 1881 ought to have settled all such rumors at that time.

In witness hereof we have hereunto set our names.

(Signed) WM. L. HORNE.
(Signed) W. H. ARNOLD.
(Signed) GEO. C. LEADER.
(Signed) W. S. ARNOLD.

Inspection made by militia authorities previous to and during the time that 2nd floor was used for armory by Company "I," 5th Reg. Pa. N. G. must certainly also be convincing.

Such rumors started by malicious persons with bad intent and repeated by the thoughtless do grievous harm to my interest and also condemn the work done by Bedford mechanics exclusively and constructed out of Bedford County material as much as possible. The plans for building were made by Mr. Samuel Sloan, the most eminent architect Penna. has produced, whose works are today the standard works of instruction in this branch in most of the best colleges of the U. S.

Reward!

Fifty Dollars reward is offered for evidence to convict each and every person who has in the past or does in future circulate these malicious falsehoods about the construction and stability of my building.

A Futile Test

We believe that Superintendent Nathan C. Schaeffer voiced the opinion of the most successful educators when he said in a speech to a great gathering of teachers in Philadelphia recently that examinations are no test of a child's knowledge. Where examinations are the rule, Dr. Schaeffer said, the child does not study to master the subject, but to answer questions. He characterized examinations as a last resort of incompetent teachers, and said they debased the true educational system. The child's ability to go into the next grade is the true test, and of this the teacher should be the judge. If there must be examinations, let them be held by no one except the teacher.—Harrisburg Patriot.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Communication From Our Regular Correspondent.

Washington, D. C., April 28.—The American Newspaper Publishers' Association is pursuing a vigorous campaign to obtain the passage, at this session of Congress, of bills placing wood pulp and print paper on the free list, and the agitation of the subject has been so great as to wholly upset the equilibrium of Speaker Cannon. The association is taking every advantage of its constitutional right of petition and is being ably supported by John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, the Democratic leader whose performance is most edifying to the publishers and proportionately annoying to Cannon. As a matter of fact, Speaker Cannon is master of the situation and while his appointment of a select committee to investigate the operations of the so-called paper trust will in no way deceive either the public or the publishers, who are thoroughly familiar with the Speaker's "flim flam" methods, it will bottle up the publishers most effectively.

Davis' Name Removed
A resolution was offered in the House last week by Representative Carlin of Virginia, seeking to elicit information from the War Department as to the reasons that actuated the government in removing the name of Jefferson Davis from the tablet on Cabin John Bridge. The resolution directs the Secretary of War, if not incompatible with the public interests, to inform the House by what authority the name of Davis was removed from the stone tablet, and directs that the House be informed what steps, if any, have been taken toward restoring the name of Davis as Secretary of War to the stone. This affords a fine opportunity for a controversy over the life and public services of Jefferson Davis. It will be remembered he was Secretary of War under President Buchanan and almost up to the time of the Civil War. His name was on the arch of this bridge and is most conspicuous by being erased.

Federal Encroachment
Senator Rayner of Maryland made a strong plea in the Senate for the inviolability of the Constitution and the limitation which it places upon Federal encroachment on the rights of the States. Mr. Rayner said his remarks were not intended to be used as campaign material, that his motive was simply to clear away, if he could, the public misapprehension of the attitude of those who uphold the doctrine of State rights. "I will, therefore, now define what I mean by State Rights Democracy," said Mr. Rayner. "I mean this, nothing less and nothing more, that the rights of the States must be maintained inviolate, as intended by the framers of the Constitution; that there must be no perversion of the delegated powers so as to strike down the reservation to the States, and that whatever rights the States possess under the Constitution and under the amendments must remain intact and unimpaired until, if ever, the Constitution should be changed by the voice of the people according to the methods that it provides, and the structure of our government should be diverted from its present conception and design."

Mr. Rayner stated that the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution is the storm center of the fight, and declared "We are fully capable in the States of managing our own affairs in accordance with our traditions, our usages, and our customs."

POTATO PLANTING

How to Get the Biggest Crop—Experiments.

Schellsburg, April 28, 1908.
Last year I tried several experiments with planting early potatoes. I would hesitate to report the results without further testing if it were not for the fact that they tally so closely with the results reported by the U. S. Department and the New Jersey Agricultural Stations after thorough tests.

I planted sixty-foot rows, setting the cut pieces 15 inches apart in each row, and the rows 2½ feet apart, giving all the same cultivation and fertilizer. There were three rows each of halves (cut lengthwise), quarters, two-eye pieces, and single eyes. The condition of the vine and the yield varied exactly with the size of the piece, the halves outyielding the two-eyes about one-half, and the others in proportion. Of course it takes considerably more seed to plant halves than two-eyes, but the yield of good sized potatoes more than pays back the extra seed.

A second experiment to settle a mooted question here, was made to determine whether potatoes that have sprouted in the cellar or ground bring their crop earlier than those which have not. Three rows were planted: No. 1, with sprouts averaging six inches; No. 2, with sprouts about one inch long, and No. 3, with no sprouts. No. 3 brought the first potatoes and the biggest crop, No. 2 second, and No. 1 third, clearly showing that sprouts of this character are not an advantage, but quite the reverse.

As a result of a series of exhaustive experiments, Kraus & Woolny, of Germany, report that the slight wilting of seed pieces increased the yield on moist soils and in a wet season, but reduced it on soils not retentive of water and in dry seasons. The Department of Agriculture, in bulletin No. 35, advises against heating the cut pieces and against excessive wilting. In this regard we followed the advice of the Department and planted freshly-cut pieces. In ground that we had limed the potatoes were badly infested with scab, while where the land was unlimed no scab to amount to anything appeared.

We are getting from the Vermont Station of the Agricultural Department several bushels of several varieties of potatoes which the Department is seeking to make blight-proof. The work is to be carried on here under controlled conditions and Department direction. Some of the varieties are reported as very resistant to blight now; when the strain is perfected in this blight-resisting quality it will certainly prove a boon to us here, as the last few years we have lost a large percentage of our potato crop through the blight.

The Flutes of Spring

The flutes of spring are all in tune
And playing everywhere.
Oh, crystal-clear and ripple-toned
They sound along the air

The long arpeggios of the sun
Sweep over hill and plain,
And in the misty valleys sound
The tones and trills of rain.

Wild melodies of strolling winds
Go swift across the sky,
The young-leaved wood is loud with calls,

Where nesting robins fly

Some spirit roams upon the earth,
New-born, wing-sandalled, free
And for him, where he strays, the flutes

Pour out their melody.

"Then listen to the tune of them
That play at April's birth,
Whose call is to the waking heart
From the deep soul of earth."
—Ethel B. Howard, in the May Scribner.

When you think of indigestion think of Kodol, for it is without doubt the only preparation that completely di-gests all classes of food. And that is what you need when you have indigestion or stomach trouble—something that will act promptly but thoroughly; something that will get right at the trouble and do the very work itself for the stomach by digesting the food that you eat and that is Kodol. It is pleasant to take.
It is sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

For the Housewife

Some active women who pride themselves in housekeeping seem to forget that the object of keeping house is that human beings may be accommodated in it. Their sole idea seems to be this, that the house may be kept in a certain form and order;
and to the performance of the form
and order they sacrifice the comfort
the house was established to secure.

Colds That Hang On

Colds that hang on in the spring deplete the system, exhaust the nerves, and open the way for serious illness. Take Foley's Honey and Tar.
It quickly stops the cough and expels the cold. It is safe and certain in results. Ed. D. Heckerman.

A Charming Target

The Modern Girl seems to be a sort of human target at which everybody loves to have a shot. There is nothing that she does or says which is not sharply criticised. She cannot play a game, talk to a man, or—in her light-hearted moments—slide downstairs on a tray without being rigorously called to account by her social mentors.—Sketch.

Impure blood runs you down—makes you an easy victim for organic diseases. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies the blood—cures the cause—builds you up.

Cleaning Pillows

Feather pillows may be freshened
and the feathers made light by placing them out of doors in a clean spot during a hard rain. Let them be thoroughly wet and then hang in a warm place to dry. Spots on the pillow cover may be removed with a paste of water and fuller's earth. Another way to clean the feathers is to place them in a cheese cloth bag and wash them in warm, soapy water, followed by several rinsings in clear water. Feathers should never be placed in the sun.

DRESSMAKING NOTES

If you wish to wear a slip under a freshly done up lingerie waist don't put on the slip first and then the waist. Instead spread the waist on the bed and place the inner slip in it; put on as one waist.

In cutting your shirt waists, if you will give them a little more length than is customary you will have a garment that will not outlive its usefulness, but will render you additional service as a home tea jacket.

Many new dresses are embroidered with French knots in most elaborate designs. They are used for solid embroidery, the design itself just outlined and the knots used for filling,
snowdrops and grapes and strawberries are particularly adapted for this sort of work.

Fine checked gingham is the best material for these useful little suits for small girls and boys. The best patterns are plain in front, with the buttons down the back. Long sleeves are finished with narrow cuffs and a round collar is divided in the center front. A little pocket can be sewed on the left side of the waist front.

PERSONAL

If any person suspects that their kidneys are deranged they should take Foley's Kidney Remedy at once and not risk having Bright's disease or diabetes. Delay gives the disease a stronger foothold and you should not delay taking Foley's Kidney Remedy. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Notes

To a man afflicted with color-blindness all objects appear in different shades of gray or black,—neutral tints. Some men are spiritually so afflicted and all life is dark and shaded; but to us whose souls revel in color, ah! what infinite variety of beauty appeals to us.

Keeping Milk

Sweet milk without ice is a problem. I have solved it. Each morning I scald what I wish to keep for cooking purposes, and the remainder is poured into either pitchers or cans and covered. Next I place the cans in a deep dish or pail, which I afterwards fill two-thirds full of cold water, and carry to a cool place; in extremely hot weather I had to change the water once or twice during the day, the pleasure which one feels in serving it for tea more than compensates for the extra labor.—New Haven Register.

EXCELLENT SERMON (Continued From Third Page)

cosm, with its laws, powers, orbit.
No wonder wise men are seeking to know its meaning; seeking relationships between these separate spheres,
and striving to learn the wonderful working principles which we call Life.

Man, so peculiarly constituted, by his God-given powers of mind and spirit, can live again in the past, can reproduce its actions and results,— as in Memory,—and can look forward into the future, traveling in thought through stellar spaces of immensity, and as with a telescope of knowledge, see all that is without and beyond, or with the microscope of introspection, study himself in his cave of personality.

Man, by art, invention, steam and electricity, has practically destroyed time and space, and all things seem put under the feet of his will. It is wonderful but true that, like Hector of old, driving the Greeks to their vessels, scattering them on the seashore, civilized man today seems to have broken down all old limits and hindrances to activity and is now standing on the sea-line of illimitable space, looking out wistfully to see what lies behind the horizon of life.

But in such a sublime period of life as we are living in today the school boy who thinks recess and vacation the best part of school life;
who thinks to cheat the teacher, but merely cheats himself by an unstudied lesson or avoided task; or the man who seeks self and pleasure as the only end of life, or those who seek social success, or power for its own sake, or pile of dust, even though gold-dust—these have all lost the best of life.

But some desire and seek excellence, maturity, wholeness, or holiness—noble aims!—and the life will show results. Far better that man like one should be cast by God into the crucible and tested there. The fires are lighted and the dross consumed; and all that is worthy and real and true is found remaining in the spiritual substances of manhood and character. Let the ashes be thrown aside with the dross! All that is worthy and valuable they take with them as they go on and go over the Great Divide.

What a mighty influence is this beauty of a holy life in the world!
The spirit of God quickens the desire and purpose of the soul to be good and pure and holy. Far better than other gifts is this, as Charles Kingsley writes:

"Be good, my dear, and let who will
be clever;

Do noble things nor dream them
all day long.
And so make Life, Death and the Vast Forever
One grand, sweet song."

Seek this as hid treasure and you shall be rich;
Only your heart to your heart shall
show it,
Else yourself or the world will never know it.

Live this pure, white life and all the earth shall be better and happier.
Mrs. Browning puts it:

"No life
Can be pure in its purpose and strong
in its strife
And all life not be purer and stronger thereby."

But a holy life is but a hemisphere, but half of a true human life. To complete the circle you must have the other half, and that is Service.
Holiness for self; service for God and man. This completes the circle and makes all life spherical. What fragrance is to the rose, holiness is to the heart. But what the ripened fruit is to the blossom, is this service of God and man to your life. Life becomes more than a pleasure tour
in a parlor car amidst the glorious beauties of nature. It is a work and labor of love to God and man.

This world is more than a playground or a tennis court. It is a titled field. It is more than a gymnasium to develop the physical. It is a workshop where men manufacture goods—characters, deeds. It is not a storehouse of sweets, filled with spiced pleasures and joys; nay, it is rather a great Louvre palace gallery filled with the masterpieces of great workers, thinkers, artists, men! It is a book we may study yet never master. For two years the workmen in Venice have been driving heavy piles into the soil as a foundation for the new Campanile to rise where the old one fell. They have just reached the level of the Piazza now. So life with the young is still foundation work, preparatory to what shall rise to God's glory. The future building stands on foundation of past lessons, studies, dreams, experiences, so the question must ever rise, What is your life to be? its ideal and purpose?

Let me press this upon you: Religion gives the mode of the perfect life. This earth has known nothing grander, higher, nobler, than the life of One who was on earth as one that served! One who took the place and form of a servant that by life and lip,
by word and will, by duty and death served the whole round world. It is the Prophet of Nazareth in Galilee
who is the pattern of all human excellence and He cries to us—"Follow, imitate me!" Only when you thus desire to live and so resolve can you be said to begin to live. On an old tombstone in Spain is graved the words: "Here lies an aged man, 4 years old" for he was 80 years of age before he had found this truth, and then during four years he lived the Christian life. But no more terrible epitaph was ever engraved than that over the grave of a profligate and wicked man—"Here lies the Soul of the licentious Don Pedro Garcias." Our God has put us in this world to learn. Enjoyment may come and does but we must learn. Be learners then in the school of Christ! This is Life: Learning and loving and leaving to go on to learn more.

So your life must be one of service.
So far you have been served by parents, teachers, friends, Christ; now
you must begin to serve the world and man. This is the Ideal! For we can only serve God in this world by serving our fellowmen. "Inasmuch as you did it to men—ye did it to me." A life of service leads to the Heaven of God. But—

"Heaven is not reached at a single bound."

But we build the ladder by which
we rise,
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to its summit round
by round.

"We rise by the things which are under feet."

By what we have mastered of good
and gain;
By the pride deposed—and the passion slain,
And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet."

The Ideal life of man is found in copying Christ, living a life of purity, perfecting itself in holiness with the spirit of Christ which clothes us and panoplies us with sweetness, purity and goodness. As earth lights are reflected from the clouds of night,
so this holiness shall be seen beyond our little inch of time. Our—

"Life like a dome of many-colored glass,
Stains the white radiance of eternity."

This is the life worth living and is the Christian's answer to the question of the doubter, "Is Life worth living?" It is this which gives nobility to men—What you have to give to God and men will be blessed and accepted.

"God does not need
Either man's work, or his own gifts;
who best
Bears His mild yoke, they serve Him
best; his state
Is Kingly; thousands at His bidding
speed,
And post o'er land and ocean without Rest—
They also serve who only stand and Wait."

The world will be richer, better,
happier for every such life so lived.
Then right views will make life a sweet song—a symphony—to thrill
the hearts of thousands who shall hear. One of earth's greatest kings has on his shield the words "Ich dien," "I serve," and one-fourth of earth's population is so served! It is nobler far than to say—"I am served." Man's chief end will then always be thus to glorify God in the service of men, and by holiness of heart. The end determines the Life—How shall we fulfill this end? How fill each day's empty vessels brought to us at the dawn with the sweet wine of such a Christly life of service and purity, of faith and love?

Choose the path of life and your labor or service of love; choose wisely;
put yourself into your work and you cannot do it poorly. Your talents, two or ten, shall be used and rewarded by further and fuller service—"Have thou rule over ten cities!" Your reward shall be great in the kingdom. The doors of the future open before your eager feet.
Go in; choose the right path and serve the world.

"Enter this path! There is no grief
like Hate!
No pains like Passions, no deceit
like sense!
Enter the path! Far hath he gone
whose foot
Treads down one fond offence."

"Enter the path! There spring the healing streams
Quenching all thirst! There bloom
th' immortal flowers,
Carpeting all the way with joy!
There throng
Swiftest and sweetest hours."

This prescription cures all stomach troubles by strengthening the digestive machinery and putting it in such perfect order that it will care for all the food that is eaten without distress or indigestion.

So certain and reliable is Mi-o-na to cure indigestion and all stomach weakness, that F. W. Jordan sells it under an absolute guarantee to refund the money unless it cures. Try a 50-cent box and see how quickly you will get relief from indigestion and forget you have a stomach.

OUR TEACHER.

[Written for a young lady friend at the close of school term by Damon Harvey.]

In this temple of instruction
We assemble here today;
Every heart string thrills with pleasure,
All within seem bright and gay.
We have pondered over problems
That perplexing first appeared,
Yet, by faithful, earnest study
Have the tangled myst'ry cleared.

School-hood ties we now must sever;
Farewell teacher, class-mates all.
From the previous pleasant period
Sacred memories we recall;
Ever earnest, ever patient,
Ever zealous, kind and true
Pensively our faithful teacher
Would unfathomed themes construe.

While we foster fond affection
For our school-mates ever dear,
Let us not forget our teacher
Who has shared our troubles here.
In the hallowed chain of friendship,
Though in distant climes we rove
Let us keep for her unbroken
A few sacred links of love.

Should we heed her earnest pleadings
Lives of pleasure lay in store,
Reaching from parental moorings
To the heavenly shining shore;
In our hearts her deeds are treasured,
Fondlest memory brings us cheer,
From benighted childhood vision
Wisdom, pleasure, peace appear.

While the council of our teacher
With fond parents' warning vie,
Heeded, bringeth in full measure
From the harvest field on high;
Where all wear a crown of garlands
By Celestial fingers wove
From the ever blooming blossoms
Of perpetual peace and love.

Let no period pass unheeded
To prepare for us a place;
Ever onward, higher, upward,
T'wards the throne of love and grace;
Where the fruits of all our labor
Will be reckoned rich and rare,
Which our kindred, teacher, school-mates
And the Heavenly Host may share.

When we leave this worthy structure
This quaint proverb keep in view:
Ever do unto your neighbor
As you'd have him do to you;
Strive and live to be commended,
Emulate the works of man,
For our lives are what we make them,
Let us make them what we can.
P. S.—See "adv" in this issue by same author, "Do it yourself."

A great many people imagine they have heart trouble when the fact is that the whole trouble lies in the stomach. The pains in the side around the region of the heart are not necessarily heart trouble. We suggest that you start with the stomach and whenever you feel a depression after eating or whenever your food seems to nauseate take Kodol. It will not be very long until all these "heart pains" will disappear. Take Kodol now and until you know you are right again. There isn't any doubt about what it will do and you will find the truth of this statement verified after you have used Kodol for a few weeks. It is sold here by Ed. D. Heckerman.

Mrs. Edward Hair

Elizabeth, wife of Druggist Edward Hair of Roaring Spring, died on Saturday, April 25, at the Nason hospital, following an operation for peritonitis, aged 59 years, four months and 20 days. During the past twelve years, Mrs. Hair submitted to four operations, the last but a week previous to her death.

She was the eldest daughter of Adam B. Pote of Baker's Summit, at which place she was born on December 5, 1848, and grew to womanhood. May 1, 1876, she was married to Edward Hair who, with one daughter, Mrs. Frederick Garver, survives; also the following brothers and sisters, Jacob, David and Adam Pote and Mrs. George H. In 1866 he married Miss Catherine Lane of Ligonier and two years later moved to Iowa. He served in Co. S, 35th Illinois Infantry during the Civil War. Deceased was a brother of the late John A. ### SPRAYING DEMONSTRATION.

For Codling Moth Will Be Held at County Home.

Just as soon as the blossoms fall there will be a spraying demonstration for the codling moth, the worm which makes the wormy apples and fungus diseases. The indications are now that it will be next week at the County Home, south of Bedford. This spraying is an important operation, as every fruit-grower should spray for this insect which damages from 50 to 75 per cent. of the crop every year. Worm-eaten fruit is only second class, characteristic of Bedford county apples. The first class apples are in demand; second class apples are a drug on the market, yet the labor in handling is just the same but profits less. R. F. Lee.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

The Ladies' Home Journal for May is called a Girl's Number, and it is a girl's number, indeed. On the front cover is a charming sunbonnet girl, whose charm and spirits seem to pervade the issue.

The "sweet girl graduate" and her family will be interested in a page by Hamilton W. Mabie, called "The Girl and her Graduation Essay."

All girls, and we suspect some men, also, will be interested in an article, "How Ethel Barrymore Thinks a Young Girl Should Dress." Miss Barrymore, herself, dresses with a girlish simplicity which other girls might well copy.

The Ladies' Home Journal Patterns cover the designs brought out in THE JOURNAL, itself, and are a wonderful help to the well-dressed woman.

THE JOURNAL, itself, is on sale at our pattern counter, each month, at 15 cents per copy.
